Founding Statement

The OHM has been established because it recognises that the party political system in South Africa is flawed and an alternative way of administering governance is necessary. The OHM as a political party will advocate for these changes.

The main motivating factors for creating an alternative political system are as follows:

1. There is no 1 perfect ideology, party, person or government that can provide South Africa with the right solutions for everyone.
2. Public representatives at all spheres of government represent their parties more than they represent the people.
3. Democracy in its current state is a ruse. No matter who you vote for, life for the majority remains unchanged.
4. Even a competent government cannot and should not solve the social ills plaguing society.
5. Citizens are becoming increasingly willing to give up their freedom in the name of safety.
6. We as a people and country are powerless against any internal and external threats.
7. We are living in a form of slavery, with just enough comforts to keep us going without making any noise.
8. Our Parliament is paralyzed because parties are fighting each other instead of doing the work of parliament which is to assess, amend and pass laws to improve the lives of South Africans.

The Solution

The OHM is a liberal, de-colonising, anti-establishment, liberation, movement

Liberal:

The more government promises to solve our problems, the more enslaved we become. The OHM's aim is to teach specific principles that enable people to govern themselves. The OHM understands that the first most important level of government is the government of the self. National and local governments will always have their place, however will never be all-encompassing and should know its place and stay in its place.

De-colonising

In order to heal the wounds of the past and in order to create our own South African culture and identity it is imperative that we rid South Africa of strong colonial influences and to replace colonial influences with policies right for our country and unique circumstances.

Anti-establishment

The OHM rejects the conscious and unconscious agendas of corporations and monopolies both locally and internationally. The great divide in South Africa between the rich and poor is largely attributed to the unwarrantedly high salaries and bonuses of CEO's while more than half of the population live in poverty unable to provide for themselves or their families. The OHM aims to drastically minimise the wage gap without inhibiting the economy's progress. We believe in a free market without exploitation. Our right to privacy is arrogantly ignored and trampled upon by global technological giants as well as our very own government, who care only for profit and control.

Liberation

We do not want the people of South Africa to continue being oppressed by the current political, education or economic system. We want South African solutions driven by South Africans. We want South Africans to benefit from the natural resources of the country. We want to be a strong nation that is built upon strong individuals. We want to grow into a strong, resilient and wealthy nation where no one is oppressed or disadvantaged because of the government's choices and where people have access to the resources they need to earn a living.

OHM is a nationally registered political party with members all over the country. Our head office is in Cape Town. The idea of "OHM" was started on the 10th of October 2017. On the 14th of December 2018, OHM was officially registered as a political party.

We appeal to everyone who feels oppressed or afflicted by the current political and economic system to join with us to revolutionize governance so that the people of South Africa can be liberated.
